Miss Finch Angry.

Trembling with indignation, Miss Finch stepped to the front of the platform and, holding aloft one of the trouble-making sheets, denied the allegations made by the DENIAL MEETS APPLAUSE and the author of it. She requested the congress that the author of the leaflet, if a delegate or member of the society, be compelled to reveal her identity if she has not the moral courage to step for-ward voluntarily.

Miss Finch branded the charges as

"scurillous, false, and untrue," and said that the report of the magazine commit-tee, of which she is the chairman, would be laid before the congress at today's sessions duly signed by all the members

The leaflet asks to know what be-came of the magazine funds since August and whether the chairman of the committee and the clerks are bonded, and insinuates that everything is not as it should be in connection with the maga-

A rumor circulating in the corridors of the hall was to the effect that the circulars had been left with Mrs. Randall, of George Rogers Clark Chapter, of Oak Hill, Ill., in the Illinois room.

Mrs. Randall Explains. Mrs. Randall explained to the meeting that, being a new member, she did not know what it all meant and that she gave some of the circulars to other members, without having read the con-Randall's explanation, the members being satisfied that her connection with the incident was entirely innocent.

During the discussion Miss Janet Richards Washington ards, of Washington, wanted to know how the circulars got into the house. Mrs. Bryan, of Alabama, said that an un-signed paper should be treated with silent contempt; Mrs. Smallwood, of signed paper should be treated with slient contempt; Mrs. Smallwood, of Washington, demanded that the author sign her name; Mrs. Draper, also of the District, asked that another rising vote be taken, as some of the national of-ficers on the stage had remained seatfor threw yesterday's afternoon session incers on the stage has remained at the annual congress at Continental ed, which would seem to imply that they knew the author; Mrs. Dunning, of the gallery shoutests, up in the gallery shouted that the leaflet had been handed to hurried search for Mrs. Randall, of Oak Park, could give information on the subject and a Hold Memorial Services.

MRS. MINOR

Mrs. George Maynard Minor, of New London, is the candidate of the Connecticut Daughters of the American Revolution for vice president general of the national society, ten of whom are to be elected at the Continental Congress, Mrs. Minor is a woman of rare strength of character and good executive ability. She has had large experience in public affairs, not only in her home city, where she is identified with many of the charitable organizations, but at large. She is the retiring State vice regent of the D. A. R., a counselor in the National Society of the Founders and Patriots of America, a member of the National Geographical and Historical Society, and an artist of reputation, her paintings having been hung in famous gaileries. She will add distinction to the national board of the Daughters of the American Revolution, if elected, as her friends in the Connecticut delegation confidently anticipate.

Mrs. William Reynolds, a North Carolina delegate, gave a delightful "at home" to the fifty-eight delegates from that State in the blue room at the Willard yesterday affernoon.

A social and business meeting of the delegates from Virginia was held yesterday afternoon in the Virginia State room. Mrs. Pleasonton Conquest, of Richmond; Mrs. 8. W. Smoot, of Alexandria; Mrs. Ben Purcell, of Richmond; Mrs. Virginius Shackelford, of Orange, and

New Row Started.

The question of the revision of the Constitution precipitated another exeedingly lively and exciting discussion as to the exact meaning and nature of the word "revision." Some of the members contended that it meant new busiand could therefore be treated as such, while others insisted that it meant something altogether different. The parliamentarian, Mrs. Emma A.

Fox, was finally appealed to, and in a matter-of-fact way she took the Daugh-ters to task for not permitting the presi-dent general of the society. Mrs. Story. to go shead with the discussion and decide on doubtful points when they pre-sented themselves.

Mrs. J. Morgan Smith, chairman of the committee on revision of the constitution and by-laws, explained that only slight changes had been made in the same revisions which had been read and much discussion the draft was read, paragraph, and section by section, with frequent interruptions.

Mrs. Smallwood, of the District, desired to know the exact meaning of the words "amendment" and "revision," and costume was of purple and heliotrope.

Mrs. Mary S. Lockwood offered a way color effect. out of the labyrinth by suggesting that point by point of the revision and amendaments be read, discussed, and disposed of. Mrs. Roome, of the District, first asked to portpone the discussion of the proposed change of the constitution and afterward moved to lay it on the table. Mrs. L. R. Schuyler, of New York, objected to both of Mrs. Roome's suggestions, and many of the Daughters started to leave the hall. It beins 5:30

A mysterious little figure in black, with a big sunbounet, playing a violin, made a pathetic and touching picture outside Memorial Continental Hall. Pieces of silver dropped by the delegates on their way to and from the sessions furnished a constant accompaniment to her slowly strummed patriotic music.

Among the notable women attracting ut of the labyrinth by suggesting that York, objected to both of a suggestions, and many of the Daughters started to leave the hall. It being 5:30 o'clock a motion to adjourn prevailed.

Mrs. Edgar A. Ross, at the opening of Washington Howard, whose great-great-grandfather was a brother of George the afternoon session, read a paper on grandfather was a brother the great seal of the United States, its Washington. She is a del mystic symbology and significance. "The American eagle," she said, "is not a double-headed monstrosity like the Rus-sfan bird, and does not permit other birds of prey to come within its domain."
After she had concluded, Mrs. William
Lawson Peel, of Georgia, vice president general, remarked that she had never heard before that the American baid eagle had thirteen feathers in his tail, and advised the Daughters that, "if oyu cannot soar like an eagle you might learn to coo like a dove." A resolution was adopted that a com-nittee be appointed to study the heraldry

Mrs. Story Makes Report.

Mrs. Story announced in her annual report at the morning session that the D. A. R flag that went with Peary to the North Pole would be on the first American vessel to pass through the Panama Canal. The acceptance of the offer to use the flag was sent to Mrs. Story by Stor

Col. Goethals. Mrs. Story emphasized the friendly relations existing between na-tional and State officers, and showed that the society has established a new general department by which it is pur-posed to assist inquirers in looking up their American ancestry. Her chief recommendations were to curb the expenditures of the organization and to try, wherever possible, to have a national officer at each State society meeting. Mrs. Henry L. Mann, the vice president in charge of organization of charters, reported that 106 chapters had been organized during the year and only four had disbanded. Cards for new Rans-dell, the treasurer general, gratifying. In the current fund, a gain for the year of $31,645.37 was reported. In the perma nent fund the gain was $17,782.65, and the income of special funds amounted to $355.37, making a total new income for the year of $49,780.72.
